Music to inspire the young

Central Texas children got a music lesson from some big name musicians.

The Texas Music Project, which highlights the importance of music education, joined forces with Austin's newest fine dining restaurant.

On Monday at Finn & Porter musicians joined some of Austin's talented youngsters at the restaurant's grand opening.

Organizers say music education goes a long way.

"It's important to know that music education is about helping to create better citizens, healthier communities and better businesses, not just creating better, stronger musicians," said Bruce Orr, president of the music project.

Local singer Patricia Vonne was one of the performers at the event.
